

Prof. Maria Tektonidou is Head of the Rheumatology Unit at the First Department of Propaedeutic Internal Medicine, University of Athens, Greece, and she is an Executive board member of the "Joint Academic Rheumatology program, EULAR Centre of Excellence". She is a member of the Executive Committee of the 'European Lupus Society-SLEuro' and the "APS ACTION - AntiPhospholipid Syndrome Alliance For Clinical Trials and InternatiOnal Networking", and she is leading the 'EULAR Antiphospholipid syndrome study group". She has also been recently elected as disease coordinator for the Antiphospholipid syndrome in the European Reference Network on Rare and Complex Connective Tissue and Musculoskeletal Diseases. She has recently chaired the 'EULAR Recommendations for the management of APS' and the "EULAR recommendations for cardiovascular risk management in RMDs including SLE and APS", and she is currently convening the "Development and Validation of a EULAR disease activity score in APS" project. Her major research interests include the epidemiology, clinical manifestations, management, and long-term outcomes of APS and SLE patients and she has over 220 peer-reviewed publications (15,500 citations, h-index 51 (Google Scholar)).